Programme Committee

It would be a privilege to serve on the programme committee and contribute to the BCS annual meeting - it would be an opportunity to contribute more widely to the society, represent the views of trainees and early-career members, and help contribute to a high-quality, balanced, and impactful conference programme.

As a regional representative for the British Junior Cardiologists' Association and STC trainee representative, I have engaged directly with trainees and colleagues at a regional level. These experiences have provided insight into trainees' main priorities: high-quality education, clinical relevance, equitable opportunities, and a programme that reflects the full scope of modern cardiology. In addition, my leadership roles have strengthened my ability to listen, organise, and deliver results. I recognise the importance of balancing perspectives, collaborating effectively, and ensuring the programme meets the needs of all audiences, including trainees, early-career clinicians, consultants, researchers, and allied health professionals.

I would contribute energy, reliability, and a strong trainee perspective to the committee. I am passionate about contributing to sessions that are engaging, inclusive, and focus on emerging science, innovation in service delivery, and the practical challenges we all face in everyday cardiovascular care. I believe the annual conference should inspire delegates, support professional development, and provide a platform for meaningful discussions across subspecialties.
